About Us

You know, not many financial institutions can say their first branch was a school classroom. Originally called Northeast Johnson County Teachers' Credit Union, our financial cooperative was first run by a group of passionate teachers whose goal was to help fellow educators with their finances.

Our little credit union has come a long way since its early days. We've changed our name to Mainstreet Credit Union, built 11 branches, and grown to more than $600 million in assets.

While you won't find us sitting in classroom desks these days, we still remain loyal to our roots and those who paved the way.
